Mack knew that he was not going to play this year.

Baker desires to bring out this point so that he may not be accused of breaking his contract, and to protect the Delaware County league against the charge of harboring a contract jumper. Baker further says that Connie Mack gave his consent to his playing hall but not in Philadel. his playing ball, but not in Philadelphia and, therefore, feels justified in Bake says that the only reason he offered to join the Athletics this year and play out the season is to straighten out matters. ed:

"It is not a case of money. The salary that my contract calls for is satisfactory to me. I do desire to get away from big baseball, as I do not care to remain away from home, as I have to do in the big leagues. I have no desire to play with any other team than the Athletics, and only consent to play one more year so that the whole matter may be straightened out. Mr. Mack may have my services whenever he resires them under the conditions I named to him. I will not play this year so long as the contract exists which holds me for next season, and which may place me in the same and which may place me in the same position as at the present time. I do not want to play this year, but am willing to go in and work my head off one more year just to put things straight."

O'ROURKE PRESENTS REASONS. To National Board Why the Eastern Association Season Did Not Start.

Following his official announcement Saturday that the Eastern association would not start the 1915 season, President O'Rourke has declared he had already sent papers to the national board giving reasons why the league should be permitted to suspend this season and reserve territory for 1916. O'Rourke's statement, in which he adnits the league will not start, is as ollows:

"Opening of the playing season havopening of the playing season having been materially interfered with by internal troubles requiring time to submit evidence on appeals to the national board and national commission, it has been found impossible to constitute satisfactory circuit. It, there-fore, is the decision of the directors that appeal be made for permission to suspend for 1915 and granting of reservation of territorial rights for 1916.

In his request to the national board for permission to suspend, O'Rourke pointed out continued loyalty of league to organized ball since circuit was organized in 1896. He said it was through no fault of present directors that league was not able to start. They had made every human effort, he de-clared. The year's suspension. O'ourke clared. The year's suspension, Course told the national board, would give Eastern directors time to put their circuit on a strong footing for 1916.

O'Rourke refused to say anything regarding the prospects of a strong circuit in 1916. The policy of secrecy will be followed, he said, until all arangements are completed. It is rangements are completed. It is known, though, that deals have been practically closed for men to take Springfield and New Haven franchises. Several are under consideration for Hartford, but Tom Connery seems to have the inside track.
